

National Conference Services for Bereaved Children

Joined-up provision from care to counselling

Wednesday 27th April 2011, Westminster Studio, London SW1

Supported by:

Speakers include:

Professor Sir Alan Craft

Review Advisor,
Palliative Care Funding Review

Debbie Kerslake

Chief Executive,
Cruse Bereavement Care

Julie Stokes OBE,

Consultant Clinical Psychologist;
Founder & Clinical Director, Winston's Wish

David Strudley

Chief Executive,
Acorns Children's Hospice

Bereavement services are moving up the political agenda, with the Palliative Care Funding Review bringing funding changes for end-of-life and bereavement services in 2011.

The Review's interim report stresses the need for better integration of health and social care services, echoing the End of Life Care Strategy's statement that care does not stop at the point of death. This conference will focus on how the needs of bereaved children can be met through joined-up thinking from hospices and hospitals, schools, local authorities, community and voluntary organisations.

As a delegate, you will have the chance to discuss best practice with leading experts, and participate in interactive workshops focusing on your particular area: health services, charities, local authorities and schools. You will also hear from the top organisations on future funding and strategy for bereavement services.
