All universities are making critical decisions about how to set fees and how to position themselves in the market.

Students have high expectations and with student complaints on the rise, even seemingly isolated cases have the potential to significantly detract from the UK's reputation for excellence in higher education. Will increased tuition fees be seen as a proxy for quality? What will be the expectation on the part of universities to raise their game?

Set in the context of the Higher Education White Paper this important national conference will bring together policy makers, student support professionals, student representatives and senior HE administrators and legal experts to consider the impact that the new financial situation will have on student expectations and the possibility of greater "consumer protection" for students.

Purpose of the Conference:

How are higher education providers preparing to respond?

Specifically this conference will:

- Map and understand the latest trends and developments in student complaints and appeals
- Hear from leading institutions who are taking real-time action and a proactive approach to complaints management
- Examine the role of the regulators and if changes need to be made in a post-White Paper environment
- Set out best practice in the use of student charters and other student agreements
- Hear from students about what they want to know about their courses and what is most important: the cost of the course, how satisfied other students were or what proportion of graduates have got jobs
- Set out strategies to enhance student engagement and collaboration with student unions and student services
- Understand the importance of an effective student engagement cycle
- Show the critical role that student support professionals and student representatives play in an age of higher tuition fees and more student choice
- Provide an opportunity to consider how to ensure the most effective and efficient complaints management procedures at your institution
- Provide an opportunity for networking and sharing good practice for all those involved in understanding student expectations, managing demand, and facilitating outstanding student experiences
