House Speaker Thomas M. Finneran's budget chief yesterday opened the door to another tax hike, a key sign that Beacon Hill may back down from its vow to cuts and government reform alone.

Last November, Finneran said flatly, "I think taxes are off the table," and insisted

LOST SOULS

Hundreds of Hub's homeless refuse shelter

By STEVE MARANTZ

An estimated 200 to 300 homeless people refused to go indoors yesterday — despite efforts by public health and safety officials — choosing to endure arctic cold and risk the fate of an elderly homeless man who died Tuesday in an unheated hut under the Southeast Expressway.

"We're on pins and needles," said Eliza Greenberg, director of Boston's Emergency Shelter Commission. "I'm heartened to see what great support systems we have in place, but I'm sickened at the idea that people could still die anyway."

Urging homeless people to go to shelters,
