7.6.2

Flexible learning resources – created by students for students

Lyn Greaves, Senior Lecturer, The University of West London

Co authors: Jo Driscoll, Emer Sheperd

Abstract:
UWL students at an HEA National Discipline Workshop & Seminar Series, 2011-2012 shared perceptions that flexible resources making explicit types of feedback would enhance confidence and learner understanding(1). This perception echoed sector activities in this area (2). Building on an earlier JISC LTIG project ALLE (3), where resources were designed to support information and digital literacy development, JISC FfIL (4) directly responded to requests for more materials of this type. Delivering flexible resources specialising in feedback allows access to critical information at a time and place of individual choosing. Project outputs are available for all HE learners 24/7 through various digital devices, thus supporting anytime anyplace learning.